Alexandria School of Theology (AST), Lecturer in Systematic Theology and Biblical Studies, 2010 to present

Courses taught at AST

Systematic Theology 2 (Christology and Pneumatology): This course covers the study of the person and work of Christ & the person and work of the Holy Spirit. Subjects include the incarnation, the nature and meaning of the atonement, the resurrection, the ascension, and the offices of Christ. The lectures also cover other topics such as, the Holy Spirit in the Old Testament, baptism by the Holy Spirit, the Holy Spirit & Union with Christ, the Ordo Salutis, and the Holy Spirit & the Church.

The Book to the Romans: This course is designed to give a wider introduction to salvation as expressed in the New Testament and especially in the book to the Romans. The course covers the historical, theological, cultural backgrounds and meanings of the epistle. Subjects include sin, wrath, faith, justification, law and the relation between the church and Israel.

New Trends in Theology: In this class, we study some theological issues that are present in the lives of our churches, in academic theological studies, and in contemporary society. These include Liberation theology, Feminist theology, Darwinism: analysis and church reaction, Protestant liberalism, Quests for the historical Jesus, Prosperity gospel theology, New perspective on Paul's theology, Karl Barth's theology.

Eschatology: The study of "the already and not yet" principle, the intermediate state, the second coming, the different views of the millennium, heaven & hell, and the church & Israel. The aim of this course is to understand the teaching of the Scripture about the last things and to help the students delight in God's plan for the church and to encourage their spiritual growth.

The Pentateuch: This course introduces the history of salvation in the OT. It covers the main events in the Pentateuch and how they relate to Christ. Historical & cultural backgrounds are investigated with an overview of the content of each book and its main message.

Confessions: This course is both historical and systematic theology. It shows the importance of doctrinal standards for the church especially in the early church and during the Reformation. First, it covers the relation between doctrinal standards and Scripture. Then it introduces the most important reformed confessions from the 16th and 17th centuries especially those that are currently used in the church worldwide.

Courses taught in the Th.M. program for Puritan Reformed Theological Seminary, offered in Egypt through the partnership with Alexandria School of Theology:

Research & Methodology in Biblical Studies: This course introduces the student to the history, epistemological foundations, and primary methods of biblical study since the Renaissance, and especially since the Enlightenment. Representative trends and interpreters are examined in detail, with an emphasis on the roles of history and epistemology. Lectures and discussion will develop a biblically-faithful model for academic Biblical Studies that integrates methodological, analytical, and anthropological facets and lays the foundations for constructive interaction with a wide variety of approaches. Seminars dedicated to critical reviews of significant monographs, and especially the final course paper, will stress the integration of these facets in analysis of the work of others and in the formulation of the student's own arguments and conclusions. The course also succinctly addresses crucial issues in research methodology that directly relate to the program's goal that "students demonstrate an advanced competence in theology . . . and a mastery of relevant primary and secondary sources. . . ."

Course taught at my local church: Weekly Bible Study:

1. Book of Romans – March 2014 to October 2015.

2. Eschatology – 2013.
3. Exposition of the Westminster Confession of Faith – September 2017 to October 2019.
